BGP Stands for Border Gateway Protocol (BGP Protocol).It is one of the most important protocols to make the Internet work the way it works. It is used mainly in two scenarios: Between ISP (Internet Service Provider) – ISP connect with at least one or more of other ISP and exchange all of their Public IP Routing information. This makes possible the connectivity around the globe for all the ...

Once BGP peers form a neighbor relationship, they share their full routing table. Afterwards, only changes to the routing table are forwarded to peers. By default, BGP assumes that eBGP peers are a maximum of one hop away. This restriction can be bypassed using the ebgp-multihop option with the neighbor command (demonstrated later in this guide).
